POLICY

Value,Trust,Respect

Money Laundering - process of converting funds, received from illegal activities (such as fraud, corruption, terrorism, etc.), into other funds or investments which look legitimate to hide or distort real source of funds.

The process of money laundering can be divided into 3 sequential stages:

- Placement. At this stage funds are converted into financial instruments like checks, bank accounts, money transfers or can be used for purchasing high-value goods that can be resold. They can also be physically deposited into banks and non-bank institutions (e.g., currency exchangers). To avoid suspicion by the company, launderer may as well make a number of deposits instead of depositing the whole sum at once, this form of placement is called smurfing.
- Layering. Funds are transferred or moved to other accounts and other financial instruments. It is performed to disguise the origin and disrupt the indication of the entity that made the multiple financial transactions. Moving funds around and changing in their form makes it complicated to trace money being laundered.
- Integration. Funds get back into circulation as legitimate to purchase goods and services.
